i++) Video Game News with Jason

- World of Warcraft
 - Exorsus gets world first Mythic Nighthold clear.
 - Mythic +24 Eye of Azhara has happened. And I thought +12 was ridiculous. Catch the video.
 - Legion invasions are beginning in Patch 7.2 so start expecting invasions popping up around the Broken Isles.
 - There will be a 6 invasion world quests that'll need completing for the first quest followed up with similar quests. After all quests are complete there will be a three player scenario that sends us to the Legion ship in the sky where we'll defeat various NPC and then the leader to take the ship down.

- Assassination Rogue is getting a 4% damage buff to just about all of its abilities
- Elder Scrolls Online - Morrowind announcement trailer has been released.
- Overwatch - Apparently you're not allowed to flirt with female fans online otherwise you can get temporarily banned from Overwatch. 2 members of the Korean team Lunatic were banned from OGN's Apex Season 2 and other events for the next two months because they were caught in multiple online affairs with fans.
- Blizzard says Overwatch skins accidentally made Mei look thinner and they'll fix it with an upcoming patch.
- GameStop may be lying to you when you ask if they have a new game instock. A new program called "Circle of Life" gives each GameStop different percentage quotas for pre-orders, reward card subscriptions, used game sales and game trade-ins based on total transactions. This new program will have employees trying to boost used games sales for every new game they sell. Don't worry, the statement they've given states they're programs are designed to give their customers the best value in all video game purchases.

i++) April's Comic Con Updates

- Robin Loyd Taylor

i++) Jason's Techy Talk

- Jury awards Zenimax half a billion dollars in Oculus lawsuit after it was found Palmer Lucky didn't comply with non-disclosure when shown the VR at Zenimax.
- Geek squad employees appear to be making a few extra dollars on the side as they've been routinely searching devices brought for repair that could net them $500 rewards as FBI informants.
- Florida has some of the highest Malware infections per capita.
- Pong is moving VR.
- 150,000 printers compromised by hackers.
- Zero-Day windows vulnerability.
