i++) Video Game News with Jason

- World of Warcraft
 - Patch 7.1.5 hotfixes on March 3 were small. Apparently Paladin and Rogue class halls didn't allow for General and Trade chat. Warriors were getting threat from Inspiring Presence heals. The Un'Goro Madness micro-holiday has been changed to march 17th to the 19th.
 - MMO-Champion has some more class mounts to view. The Hunter Class Mount looks pretty sabre kitty with feathers-ish. The Priest Class Mount could be something you'd give a hoot about. The best is the Deathknight Class Mount which is a skeletal dragon.
- Bolivia is not happy about their country's depiction in Ubisoft's new FPS Ghost Recon: Wildlands and has filed a formal complaint over the country's portrayal in the game as an "area controlled by drug traffickers".
- Windows 10 Creators Update will be including a "Game Mode" that improves performance of interactive titles running under Windows by at least a few percentage points. Developers can use internal functions to check the system to determine if Game Mode is worth turning on by default for their app.
- Nintendo added a bittering agent (Denatonium Benzoate) to their game cards so people are not inclined to stick them in their mouths. This is the same bittering agents parents put on their kids' fingernails to stop them from biting them.
- GameStop stock price dropped by almost 8% after Microsoft announced new digital-gaming service Game Pass which includes games like Mad Max, Saints Row IV and Halo 5.
- Twitch will begin selling games you're watching later this year allowing streamers the possibility to earning some of that money.

- New Tank Hero Orisa revealed for Overwatch along with her back story.
